The Center for Fine Art Photography presents its newest exhibition, Consumption, on display in the Center's gallery from July 2 - 24, 2010. Forty-seven photographers representing Australia, Italy, Korea, Mexico and the United States will be exhibiting their work in the Center's gallery. There will be an artists and public reception on Friday, July 2 from 6 pm to 9 pm.

Brian Paul Clamp, director of CLAMPART juried the Consumption exhibition. Brian has nearly two decades of experience in the field. He holds a Masters of Art in Critical Studies in Modern Art from Columbia University, and is the author of thirty publications on American Art to date. Brian noted this in his juror's statement, "However, a good deal of the entries addressed the basic, biological, human need to consume in order to survive. Images of food were abundant, particularly those depicting questionable edibles—those with little to no nutritional value—thus commenting upon the meaninglessness and futility of our unabashed gluttony." Read his full statement on the Center's website starting July 2nd.

Founded in 2004 to promote and support the art of photography through exhibitions and educational programs, The Center for Fine Art Photography is a nonprofit organization supported by donations, grants and memberships. The Center currently has more than 1,300 members representing 33 countries worldwide. With two galleries, classrooms and a digital and traditional darkroom in Fort Collins, Colorado, the Center's online gallery gives photographers and photography enthusiasts from all over the globe an opportunity to engage with the Center.
